Bio

Over the last few years Bertie went to Oxford University, got a job in finance, and then realised that it was all making him unhappy. So, he decided to quit and do what he'd been doing since he was about 11, write songs.

Bertie is no stranger to the industry. At 18, just 2 days after finishing his A-Levels, he played a gig at Glastonbury Festival with his previous solo project. Recording under the name Ben Izak, he built a modest but dedicated following that enabled him to chart at No. 4 on the Israeli album charts.

Now, back after the break he took from music, Bertie writes and records all of his material in his bedroom with his best friend. In 2022 he will be releasing a single a month with music videos, live sessions and an array of other content on his Youtube channel.

Hey Now, his debut single released in January, reached over 7,000 streams in its first month with a further 2500 views on its music video and received radio play from DJ Mark Extreme on Ejazz radio. The follow up February release, Alien, has enjoyed a better critical reception, getting a write up in the acclaimed US music blog RoqDaFuqOut and earning Bertie radio play and an interview on BBC Radio Introducing.

Bertie's fourth single, Not Easy, is out on the 29th April.

Also, all this talking about myself in the third person feels very strange, but I just wanted to take a second to thank you for taking the time to be here and read through this!
