

What do you pray for? Oslo based artist and songwriter TULLE was born with morbid curiosity, and writes about her endless questions about what the human purpose is, and what happens after we go. Inspired by folklore, horror and religious images, TULLE creates an eerie, mystical universe, inviting you to be curious and explore.

Her debut EP, Onions, was released on June 14th, explores themes of grief, healing and transformation. Her previous releases have been listed on Spotify's New Music Friday and NRK P3.

TULLE describes her genre as 'Death-Pop', taking inspiration from Lorde, Phoebe Bridgers and Ethel Cain. She will be releasing a larger body of work in January 2025.

'TULLE has positioned herself as an artist with promising potential, suggesting an exciting journey ahead with her evocative lyrics and captivating vocals.' -Carole Mercier, Conversations About Her

'This lady can sing.
I confidently expect a BBC6 Music producer to pick up on this EP and to ensure it gets played over here, pronto. Tulle shouldn't be on hiatus for long.'

-David Bentley, Nordic Music Central

'Whether you want to admit it or not, TULLE is the benchmark for what an indie artist should look and sound like.' -Natali Abernathy, Indie Boulevard
