by big names

Vanessa Murray is a small girl with a big voice.

The LIPA student, 20, first captured the attention of the music industry when sixties icon Sandie Shaw described Vanessa's performance at a UK Music competition as "astonishing".

The singer/songwriter brought that praise home with her to Anfield and started to make a name for herself on the Merseyside acoustic scene, where her sophisticated and emotive songs quickly won her awards (Liverpool Acoustic Songwriting Competition) and support slots with established artists, including The Hoosiers and Paul Carrack. Indeed, following her opening slot for the ex-Mike & The Mechanics and Squeeze legend Carrack, at Liverpool's Philharmonic Hall, he described Vanessa as "a great new artist".

Industry buzz has focused on her too, with Jo Dipple – UK Music CEO and probably the most senior women working in the music industry today – singling out a live performance from Vanessa and praising her "incredible" song writing skills.

Vanessa has holed up at LIPA this year, working hard on the music that will announce her arrival proper: 'It's About Time'. The five-track EP, mastered by Mike Cave (Bloc Party, Thea Gilmore) will drop on iTunes on November 7 and the artist will launch the release, backed by a full band, with a gig at Liverpool's famed Parr Street Studios (Coldplay, Echo & The Bunnymen) on Friday, November 6.
