

Easy Kill are a four piece indie rock band formed in Manchester in 2013 by members: Theo Tobias, Ronan Clowes, Alex Howes and Thomas Short. The band refer to their music as Doom-Pop, a sort of melancholy made catchy.

The quiet introspection of their singer-songwriter influences (Elliott Smith, Nick Drake) takes on a broader significance with a more atmospheric, dynamic musical canvas (Interpol, Explosions in the Sky).

Emphasising words and music equally, this marriage of styles makes for a bracingly intimate stage show that flows unpredictably from delicate and dreamy reveries to moments of intense catharsis.

Easy Kill's lyrics are riven by this polarisation: candidly discussing fragmented identity, a simultaneous excitement and fear about life. The band do not expect a thoughtful audience, but will no doubt engage to make them so.

Their 2015 debut EP 'Already Entitled' has been very well received and the band are currently writing and recording new material with a view to releasing a new EP 'Sermons' later this year.
