

Roni Dot's two greatest loves are music and theater.

The combination of these two worlds creates a pop-cabaret sound that makes her stand out in the Israeli indie scene. Dot's vocals and performance alongside her fashionably elegant image bring to mind pop divas such as Annie Lenox and Kate Bush.

The new album, "What may come" (2017) tells a tale of a woman who asks direct questions about obsession, love, frustration, motherhood and dreams. Writing her own lyrics and music Dot clearly defines her unique bittersweet-humoristic style.

Roni Dot's band consists of three male musicians - piano, bass and drums (both acoustic and electronic) emphasizing the feminine leadership, soft but biting, delicate but forceful.

She has proven that behind the musician there's also a truly dedicated ideological woman, ready to fight for her rights and for those of others. For several years Dot was on the board of directors of SHAHAM- Israel's actors guild, initiating major changes in the everyday life of actors/actresses with special focus on the prevailing sexual harassment.

In addition to her musical career, Dot's theatrical experience consists of dozens of Theater plays, musicals, Cinema and TV projects and also performances in significant festivals (Ein-gev festival, Acre festival...)

Nominations include Best supporting-actress in Israel's ASSITEJ National Children's Theater Awards and best supporting-actress in Israel's Fringe Theater Awards.

Roni Dot won two consecutive scholarships for Singing and Song-Interpretation during her studies.

"You need to hear Roni Dotan once in order to understand It's not the last time.
And the sooner the better...."

Amos Oren, "HABAMA"

"Dotan knows how to write witty and sensitive songs and present them in a charming way"

Sharon Shenkman, "The Marker Café"

"The lady is talented! right from the first song she gets to the audience's heart... a clean and clear voice. We very much recommend to go see and hear her"

Erez Levanon, "Mouse café"

"I was charmed"

Menachem Ben, "nrg colture"

"A young and promising singer that is very touching"

Uri Banai, actor and singer