DISCOGRAPHY

‘Suicycle’, 22 of march, 2018

The concept of the album «Suicycle» is based on a science fiction story belonging to space opera genre and written by Remy Brugère.

The story takes place in 2414, on a post-apocalyptic Earth, transformed by successive conflicts. After nuclear war, also called «Nuclear Storm» the core of the planet became unstable, lifting entire islands into the sky in levitation. In this context, what is left of humanity seeks to reinvent itself, learning from the mistakes of the past. To survive in sustainable peace, the survivors called «the elders» managed to eradicate all forms of power or discrimination, to avoid creating new conflicts.

It follows the Odyssey of a captain and his crew on a ship named Airship 415] that sails from island to island sent by «the elders», looking for the new curse that is destroying this resurgent world. It's only at the end of the journey that the crew discover that the monster they are hunting is actually men from the 21st century coming from the past to exploit the re-emerging resources of the Earth. The future crew manage to stop these men from exploiting the ressources, thus creating an economic and financial imbalance which leads humanity of the 21st century into a nuclear world war, redefining the future of this new generation.

This album is a critique of man and society today through the eyes of a futuristic population with naive, pure and respectful Buddhist orientated beliefs.

'The biggest difference between DOJ and other bands in this genre is probably that their music does not sound too similar. It seems to be fresh and diverse, while others are not.'
