Meet The DJ Who's Making Waves From Coast To Coast

Now I know what you're thinking, you might not know who DJ Silly Syl is and a serious case of FOMO (fear of missing out) is starting to slowly overcome your whole being as you read this, but don't worry, I'm here to fill your fix before you even knew you had it.

Silly Syl, real name Sylvia Parol, has been an avid music fan since her childhood. From growing up on the classics of the 60s and 70s to jamming out to 90's bubblegum pop and indie summertime jam-bands, her interest in different genres only grew as she got older. Somewhere along the way she fell in love with Hip Hop both old and new school along with the behemoth known as Electronic music and knew instantly that she needed to educate the people on whats hot and whats not. Excited, motivated, and passionate about finding her new niche in the music scene, Silly Syl began the long and grueling journey of creating her own DJing career. She started her quest here in Boston DJing for college parties as well as holding a residency at a bar in downtown Boston through her affiliation with DJs of Boston. Syl also started a monthly podcast/mix series called Silly Syl Radio in which she curates the latest and greatest Hip Hop, Top 40, and groovy Electronic beats for your listening pleasure.

After a few years of holding in down in the Boston music scene and graduating from college, Silly Syl did the only thing left to do, packed her bags and headed west. She is now located in the Bay Area and has slowly started to take over the San Francisco scene. You can even catch her playing Hella Saucey at QBar on February 2nd (AKA Tonight!) as well as The Cotton Pony Party February 27th. This is only the beginning for Silly Syl and when you see her name on all your favorite festival lineups in the future you can brag to all your friends about how you knew her before she blew up.

We want to wish Silly Syl the best of luck over in San Francisco and on the rest of her musical journey!
