The Doctor will see you now – and his prescription is a heavy dose of platform-boot-stomping, guitar riff-laden rock n roll guaranteed to cure all known ills.

A three-piece hailing from the Czech Republic and based out of the magical city of Prague, Doctor Victor are named after their founder, front man and lead guitarist.

Victor's passionate guitar is backed up by the relentless back beat of drummer Karpa and beautifully bound together by lyrical bass guitar supplied by Johnny. Together, the trio summon up an infectious evocation of late 60s/early 70s blues-infused rock with a twist all of their own.

Having perfected his skills from an early age, the band's charismatic leader Victor earned a scholarship from the prestigious Berklee College of Music in Boston, but nothing prepared him the life-changing event of being taken to see an AC/DC show by his dad. That gig proved to be a major turning point in the young musician's life. Mesmerised by the legendary rockers' mindblowing riffs and energetic stage presence, he began working on his own dream project. The result is Doctor Victor, and that early brush with rock greatness is an influence that can still be heard and seen in the band's infectious performances today. When Doctor Victor were picked to support AC/DC last year, the circle was complete.

Doctor Victor's electrifying stage shows have earned them industry acclaim, attracting interest from experienced professionals including sound engineer Tony Platt, Adam Lambert and Neil Fairclough from Queen. With their distinctive vocal harmonies and English lyrics, Doctor Victor are sure to make a lasting impact on fresh audiences here in the UK.

A feast for all the senses, Doctor Victor fully embrace the 70s rock vibe right down to the low-slung bell-bottom flares and stacked platform boots, but this is no tribute act – accomplished originality oozes from every pore. Confidently choosing to rely on musicianship and effusive energy, the band use no guitar effects in their live shows, which will transport rapt audiences to the golden age of rock n roll.

This Summer Doctor Victor are touring Europe, promoting their debut album entitled 1st Prescription. In August the band makes their first appearance in the UK and will be playing in Aylesbury, Newport, Liverpool, London and Manchester. The band can't wait to unleash their shows on new audiences. This is gonna be good medicine.
