

Boris released his debut single "Fuck You Hoe" back in 2015 and has been a rebel in the music industry ever since. Always selling out his shows, getting radio play even though his songs are always very intense, super honest and raw. He found his own music genre called GAY HIPHOP and has been very successful with that. The same year his breakout song "Rebel" was released and it changed his life. He got the opportunity to travel around Scandinavia and perform at clubs and events. In 2017 he released his first single "Not Afraid To Die" after a big break from music, most because of personal issues and Freedom was released in march 2018 and made him a full-time musician.

Boris always delivers a great show, no matter where or how many people that are attending. He makes sure that every performance counts and that every performance can change his life. He has a great connection with his fans who he loves a lot and wants to help and inspire through his music. Boris is also a LGBTQ+ activist and he sings about it in various songs. To never be afraid to be yourself, to inspire the LGBTQ+ youth and motivate them to follow their dreams no matter what.

2018 has been a great year for Boris music career, with his new singles "Freedom", "Sell Me Something" & the latest one "Problematic", Boris life has changed completely and is now a full-time musician, living his dream, proving that with hard work and dedication, anything can happen. Without a label, manager or anything, Boris managed to be featured on Scandinavias biggest magazines such as Gaffa and QX, go on a European tour, playing shows non-stop, getting radioplay, having tons of interviews and has landed him multiple modeling jobs, one of them being casted in Robyn's new music video for "Honey".

The debut album "Do Or Die" was released on Monday October 1st, making him the artist he always dreamt about. With a European tour in 7 different countries within 2 months to support the album with. Boris managed to get booked and play more than 30 shows this year, without a manager and a label. It's safe to say that Boris is one of Swedish most interesting artists out there today and with the right label and a great team, Boris could easily become the worlds next big thing.
