BERLIN, November 11th 2018

Pedro Martins, Brazilian musical prodigy, and laureate of The 2015 Socar Guitar Competition, will release his second album "VOX", on February 8th, 2019. Martins is well known for his collaborations with Kurt Rosenwinkel, Yaron Herman, David Binney, Jacob Collier, and Genevieve Artadi (Knower), as well as Brazilian jazz greats Hamilton de Holanda, Gabriel Grossi, and Léo Gandelman.

The thirteen jazz-inflected Brazilian rock songs on "Vox" result from a two year long recording, writing, and production process between Martins and luminary jazz guitarist Kurt Rosenwinkel. It's appropriate that VOX will be released on the former's independent label Heartcore Records. Though this will be Pedro Martins first album for Heartcore as a leader, it will not be the first time he has appeared in the Heartcore discography; Martins is a featured member of Kurt Rosenwinkel's Caipi Band and can be heard playing guitar, keyboards, and singing on the 2017 Heartcore Records release "Caipi". He has spent the last two years touring the world with Rosenwinkel's band, in addition to the pursuit of his own diverse and creative musical projects.

Vox features Martin's prolific multi instrumental capacities; On this record he plays guitar, piano/synths, bass, drums, percussion, flute and sings in a beautiful seraphic falsetto. He is also the principle composer, arranger, and wrote most of the lyrics on the record. All together, VOX is a deeply personal and complex journey where the listener is invited to join Martins in his wonderful world of sound and story.

"This album is like a book of stories that happened in my life, and what you can hear there is actually my inner voice narrating those stories through the medium of music" says Pedro Martins whose album "VOX" (The Voice) will be out February 8th, 2019 on Heartcore Records.
