GYFARTUS / BARBATUS

Midlands Rocks

‘‘A pretty good indication of a band on the rise’’

BBC Introducing

‘‘It's refreshing to find a band that balance being such good fun with taking their music so seriously. The concept and approach of Stubblemelt verges on the wonderfully ridiculous, but the songs they're producing are heartfelt full-bodied chunks of rock that shake the floor and embed the chorus hooks and catchy riffs in your head for weeks on end. Unpretentious, professional, and fun to work with with the music to match’’

Our journey has been a true adventure; join us for further endeavours. You won't be disappointed!

In 2010 Kyle Perry had the initial vision of what would become Stubblemelt, a simple objective, to think outside the box and have the only limitations be your own creativity. Soon after Kyle introduced Tom Marshall to the concept who was fully on board to achieve the things proposed even though he'd never touched a bass. The pair started gigging with then friend Tom Watkins to master what would become the sound of Stubblemelt. After a small time, and various formulas the pair found drumming sensation David Ashford fresh out of Uni. The band was in full flow early 2011 and Kyle started writing what would become See Your Lovers, Blood Money and Lifetime.

EP, 'The Search' was released August 21 2011. It is available on iTunes with "Lifetime" and was recorded in the historical Jewellery Quarter, Birmingham City with Andy Taylor (early "Twang" and "Editors") All tracks on the EP, and Lifetime were written by Frontman, Kyle Perry, with the exception of Angry Troll and Lord of the Gods, co-written by Tom Marshall. The Band went on to self finance a 26 date tour in 2012, sharing the EP across the country, for which we received outstanding applause.

The band then suffered a set back when then lead guitarist and long time friend Tom Watkins decided to concentrate on his career path as the band was getting too big to deal with and commit to. Kyle, Tom, and Dave now stronger than ever began an audition process that would eventually introduce them to Mat Giles who joined late 2013.

The Debut 14 track Album, 'Gypaetus Barbatus' was released May 16 2014, which took a magnificent 16 months to write, produce and master, hitting the Studio in Mansfield with producer Simon Hopkinson at Electric-Bear. Amy Collins jumped aboard The Melt mid recording process and had her stamp on the full album, further introducing her Saxophone skills on tracks 'Cant be True' & 'Only A Kiss' which is a track that Kyle used an organ donated by a family friend.

The band went on to sell out the Flapper in Birmingham on two consecutive nights for the release of the album and gained great reviews.

STUBBLEMELT

~SEE YOUR LOVERS~

When individuals engage in conversations about their favourite band; a tune they just can't stop singing; a piece of artwork deriving from a vinyl or CD cover, a trend emerging through fashion, post modern synergies within the contemporary art world, film narratives; they are becoming connoisseurs; constantly sharing their idiosyncratic experiences thereby creating a centrality for further enjoyment and participation. The act of this shared interest creates a consciousness for others to interact; our brotherhoods are developed, communities unite where social and cultural differences provide no barriers. Existing artworks, harmonies, melodies, rifts and musical influences provide emanating artists a rich tapestry for experimentation made more distinctive by incorporating mixed media into musical compositions. The term that embodies art is a global language and we feel passionately that to be involved in the art of music is to possess a great responsibility for maintaining and fostering this ethos. We are Stubblemelt, and this is the next chapter of our journey; embrace, appreciate, share!
